CARRANZA IS ASSASSINATED BY OWN MEN

Draft Dodger Escapes Guards

BERGDOLL IS STILL AT LARGE AFTER CUNNING FLIGHT

RICH PRISONER BREAKS AWAY FROM ARMY OFFICIALS.

VISITED HIS HOME

Secured Furlough to Secure Money from Secret Place.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 22.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the wealthy draft dodger who escaped from non-commissioned army officers at his home here yesterday in a high-power motor car was still at liberty today. Federal and city authorities said that an all night search had failed to reveal even the direction in which he went.

All Expenses Covered

Shortly after Bergdoll got away the police covered all avenues of escape from the city. Flyers describing the fugitive and the car in which he made his escape were sent to all sections of the city.

The case of Bergdoll, which was considered of sufficient importance to warrant his temporary release from the military prison at Fort Jay, N. Y., where he was serving a year sentence for evading the draft, has not been explained. According to the military authorities he was given a three days furlough to attend to "important business matters" which were said to be confidential.

Wore Prison Garb

When he left, however, Bergdoll was dressed in his army prison garb of olive drab denim and on a metal disc which he wore on a string about his neck was his convict number ten.

The method used by Bergdoll in escaping was explained today by James E. Romig, former magistrate and friend of Bergdoll.

Met Bergdoll at Train

"On Thursday morning I was told that Grover would arrive at North Philadelphia station at 8:45," said Mr. Romig. "T. D. Clarence Gibson, attorney for the family, I went to the station. Grover got off a New York train with two guards."

According to Mr. Romig's story, in the evening Mr. Romig returned to the Bergdoll home and found Grover and his two guards drove to Philadelphia and saw a burlesque show and returned home at midnight. One guard slept with Grover and the other in an adjoining room. Yesterday morning the guard was working on the engine of a car. Mr. Romig understood it was being repaired. He was to accompany Grover, but he didn't know where.

Goes to Answer Phone

Mr. Romig told the details of the escape. "We were in the library. Grover, the two guards and himself," he said. "Grover was reading Shakespeare. Just when he had us all laughing the telephone bell rang. Grover got into another room to answer it. When the bell continued to ring one of the guards said: 'He didn't answer that.' The sergeants looked for Grover. I joined in the hunt, but we trace of him could be found. We then found that Grover's own car, which the mechanician had been repairing in the garage had disappeared."

BERGDOLL WENT AFTER MONEY IN SECRET PLACE

Washington, May 22.—Bergdoll was permitted to leave Fort Jay on representation of his counsel that he had secreted a large sum of money in a place known only to himself. Secretary Baker said today in a formal statement.

A war department statement said General Alford, whose representatives secured the permission, had informed the department "that he had gone over the matter carefully and the circumstances indicated the truth of Bergdoll's statement about the hidden money."

Anself Was Responsible

"He also stated it was said, 'that he would pay all the expenses of the trip, notwithstanding the guard, he, as Bergdoll's counsel, would stand responsible for his prompt return to prison.'

The attorneys for Bergdoll are in honor bound to return the prisoner to the military barracks and the war department expects them, through the offer of a suitable reward and other proper means, to apprehend Bergdoll at the earliest practicable date."

Stage Is Like S. S.

Mary Nash

The general impression that the stage is harmful to morale is all wrong, according to Mary Nash, the American actress who is now making a hit in London in a play, "The Man Who Came Back." An actress recruited by workmen, says Miss Nash, "but to do so she is both healthy mentally, morally and physically. It is positively amazing to think of such a thing as loose living in connection with most of the successful actresses I know. They are more like Sunday school women."

PRISONER DEBS IS GIVEN WHOLE SILK OUTFIT, FEELS RICH

New York, May 22.—Eugene V. Debs, socialist prisoner-candidate for the presidency, stepped into the men's storeroom club it was learned today with publication of a letter from him accepting a gift of a complete silk outfit sent him by the needle trades union of New York. The outfit included hat, suit, shirt, socks, stockings and underwear.

Writing from the federal penitentiary at Atlanta where he is serving a term for obstructing the government war activities, Debs said the gift made him feel richer than John D. Rockefeller.

ROCK COUNTY DENIES BELL WANTS TO MERGE AND CAN'T BUY.

WAR CONTINUES

Rock County Seeks Ownership of Both Companies by Janesville Citizens.

That the Wisconsin Telephone company cannot, by nature of its parent company's agreement with the government, buy the Rock County Telephone company and that the Wisconsin Bell was practicing all the steamroller tricks of the "dissolved" Standard Oil in the attempted squeeze out of the Janesville company were the statements made by Marshall E. Pyle, attorney for the local company which has asked the Wisconsin Railroad commission permission to double its rates.

W. N. Cash, district manager of the Janesville Bell company, also spoke for publication on the subject.

The only decision of the conference was to press appropriation bills and conference reports. Senator Kenyon, Iowa, heading a group of senators favoring prompt action on the peace program, did not attend the conference but announced later that he would support the conference program, but would attempt to call up the measure ahead of any other bill. He said he thought there were enough votes there bringing it up before adjournment.

Michigan Adjoins June 5.

Some leaders said that if the appropriation bills and other legislation now in conference could be completed by June 5 an adjournment might be possible.

No definite plans for recess over the national convention period or adjournment could be made, prominent republicans stated, because of uncertainty of soldier relief legislation in the house and resistance of the Senate to the proposed adjournment plan, the peace resolution, and the Versailles treaty.

Soldier Bill Pushed.

On a strict party vote the house rules committee today ordered a resolution to appropriate $100,000 for a consolidation of both properties by the Wisconsin railroad commission. Realize what that would mean. With their assets larger here they would immediately dominate the market.

"What warrant, did you, James Vinci, carry in your pocket as you drove up in that car to send Maurice Enright into eternity? Without honking your horn, without a word of warning, you followed his machine like a bloodhound after its prey. The shotgun blazed and you darted away, leaving Enright drooping over the wheel for his faithful wife and fond children to welcome."

Enright Was Killed.

Throughout the three hours of O'Brien's speech Vinci was apparently at ease. Chewing gum, his head resting against the chair back, he watched the jury and the prosecutor with scarcely any visible emotion.

Only once, while O'Brien was reciting his recited murder, did he not even know that he was helping kill, he took his handkerchief from a pocket and wiped the perspiration from his face.

Spectators jammed the courtroom and thronged the open door of the witness room, all looking for a glimpse of the red-necked attorney who, voice was being beaten out the dead pines.

"Competition Uses."

Such conditions do not exist in Janesville. One gets rapid service on installations and trouble. Competition may be competition which pinches the Janesville Bell into consciousness.

It was competition which pinched the Janesville Bell into consciousness years ago. It was their poor service and few telephone connections that prompted the organization of the Rock county. When they realized the new company was a concern that he was helping kill, he took his handkerchief from a pocket and wiped the perspiration from his face.

In Rockford, where there is no competition, a business telephone costs six dollars. In other cities Measure Checks in Snow.

The measure will also prove counterproductive, that there is a wide difference between measurements of tracks in the snow at the scene of the murder and the shoes Prevoist wore.

Declaring the prosecution had failed to show a motive, Attorney Weeks said Brown and Prevoist were warm friends and the latter had every reason to wish him a long life.

Protests Landlady's Claims.

Mr. Weeks also attacked the testimony of Mrs. Aspinwall, asserting the defense would show that evidence could be placed in her statements. Mrs. Jelison testified for the prosecution that Prevoist returned to his room at her hotel at 2 o'clock on the night of the murder and not at 9 p. m. as he claimed.

The prosecution closed its case shortly after court opened this morning.

Large Demand for Tracks.

The checking account of merchants, manufacturers and business men: Apparently these deposits are made up of the capital brought by new residents, although the increased cost of doing business and the generally admitted fact that one dollar goes only half as far as it did a few years ago, accounts for more of the increase.

In our case, too, we find a large demand from our local customers.

A considerable amount of these new loans is for real estate investment and local business so that a portion of this money goes into our bank.

The bank is also engaged in the manufacture of stamps and liberty bonds.

But whatever the reason for the phenomenal progress of the Janesville banking institutions, the healthy condition and steady increase in the number of the hearty citizens who are engaged in the various

FUGITIVE PRESIDENT OF MEXICO DIES AT HANDS OF REBEL TROOPS IN MOUNTAINS, OFFICIAL BELIEF

Gen. Herrera Who Directed Attack Said to Have Turned Against Leader in Flight; Other Members of Party Are Also Victims.

COMPANIONS ALSO KILLED

Mexico City.—President Venustiano Carranza, who with a small party of followers has been a fugitive in the mountains of Puebla since late last week, was killed at Taxcalantongo early Thursday morning, according to official announcement here. His companions also were killed.

Gen. Rodolfo Herrera, it is said, directed the attack that resulted in the death of the fugitive president and his followers. He belonged to forces commanded by Gen. Francisco Mariel, who accompany Carranza in his flight from this city, but who last week deserted Carranza and joined the revolutionists.

There is some uncertainty regarding the exact affiliation of General Herrera. It is generally believed possible that he commanded a small guard which was with the fleeing president. He was in rebellion against Carranza for several years, centering his operations in the state of Puebla. He surrendered last March to General Mariel who was in command of government forces in that state.

Few Troops Were Loyal

When General Mariel went over to the revolutionists last week a portion of his troops remained loyal to Carranza, it is said, and that Carranza might have taken along with him in his flight toward Tuxpan, Herrera's forces, which finally turned against him. Taxcalantongo is a small village in the northern "panhandle" of the state of Puebla. It is across the mountains from San Andres where Carranza left his forces and took refuge in the mountains.

The official announcement was given out at 10:30 o'clock last night at the headquarters of Gen. Alvaro Obregon.

BADGER TEACHERS GET MORE MONEY

Reports From State Show People Realized Plight of Schools.

Menomonie—The reports coming to the public committee of the Wisconsin Teachers' Association from all parts of the state show that the people are realizing what a calamity a breakdown of their schools through insufficient teachers and inferior instructors would be, and they are taking steps to meet the danger in many communities by voting the teachers salaries that will enable them in part, at least, to meet the heavy cost of living.

An increase of about 30 percent has been granted by the board of education of Oshkosh. In Crossroads forward with the second increase in salaries within three months, the common council backing up the board of education in its request for a larger appropriation.

Waupaca—Acting trustee

Waupaca announced that its salary scale for school places it in the front rank of the smaller cities of that part of the state, and its officers say that few of the cities of the second and third class are offering compensation as attractive as Waupaca. Grade school teachers will be paid on an average of $1,238; high school teachers, an average of $1,578, compared with a present average in the grades of $785, exclusive of a $50 bonus voted a month ago, and a present high school average of about $1,100, also exclusive of the bonus. The average salary increase in the grades, exclusive of the bonus, is 55 percent and in the high school more than 50 percent.

County Tax City Scale

At the meeting of school boards in Milwaukee county outside of the city, a resolution was adopted asking the town and village boards to raise the salaries of teachers to the scale paid by the city of Milwaukee. In some of the large schools in the county outside the metropolis the city scale is higher paid.

Ashtead comes to the front with an increased appropriation of $30,000 for its schools. The average salary is 25 percent, the minimum in the grades being fixed at $1,000 and the maximum at $1,330. High school teachers will be paid $1,300 to $1,900. The superintendent's salary was placed at $3,000.

Jantors Given Raise

An increase of approximately 18 percent was voted by the Stevens Point board of education. The pay for grade teachers will be from $550 to $1,400 and the high school teachers from $100 to $225 each. The salary of the superintendent was raised from $3,000 to $3,500. Janitors were given an increase in pay. At the end of the present school year each teacher in the schools of Watertown will be given a bonus of $50 to help in their hard struggle while constantly increasing costs of living.

Beloit Votes Raise

The citizens of Beloit showed their colors when they were given an opportunity to vote on the question of paying school teachers wages that will keep them alive. The Beloit people voted by an overwhelming majority to increase the school tax budget $75,000. Kenosha's school board voted to pay a minimum of $100 a month and granted an increase of about 10 percent to all teachers.

A maximum of $1,500 and minimum of $1,000 was granted grade teachers at Marinette. High school teachers will receive from $1,200 to $1,800. A total increase in two years of 45 percent was granted at Madison, the average this year being 24 percent, or $65,025, the largest portion of which will be apportioned among teachers in the elementary grades. The minimum in the high grades is $1,200, and in the high schools $1,500. Superior Teachers Win.

After a legal fight the teachers of Superior obtained an increase of $400. "Adequate salaries must be offered schools, better service and continuity of services," said Judge Foley in his decision which gave a victory to the teachers. "Schools cannot long continue highly efficient without fairly paid teachers," added Foley.

Sheboygan County—In some cases teachers are using said more than the minimum called for, $90 for beginners and $100 for experienced instructors, by the new schedule of the Teachers' County association. In the city of Sheboygan the minimum for inexperienced teachers has been raised from $700 to $1,000, and hereafter the teachers won after a legal fight. The minimum in the high schools will be $1,200 and the maximum $2,100.

BLIND TAKE PART IN SHOW PLEASING LARGE AUDIENCE

In a light and pleasing comedy, "Mr. Bob" performed at the state school for the blind last evening, drawing a large audience with their interpretation and easy carriage.

Mrs. Alma Haavisto, as Patty, and Fred Hill, as Jenkins, servants in Miss Rebecca's household were easily the stars, entering into their parts with more than ordinary exuberance of spirit, which entirely relieved the presentation of their characters from anything amateurish or stilted. Miss Genevieve Cook, as Katherine Rogers' place to Miss Rebecca also exhibited possession of character and exhibited much commendation for natural and yet expressive portraiture. F. M. Barnett played the part of Philip Royston, nephew to Miss Rebecca and Kitteh, as T. A. Beadnell, Robert's town clerk, Benoist, Marion; Miss Hazel Rogers, Rebecca Luke, a maiden lady; and Mrs. McCallum, Marion Bryan, another's friend. All of the cast displayed careful training and made an entertainment which merited more of the people attending.

"Mr. Bob" is a well chosen vehicle both for its attractive plot and sparkling wit. It deals with the ever popular situation created by mistaken identities. Robert Brown the clerk, who was secretly summoned to the house by Miss Rebecca, to settle a legal matter, being taken for Mr. Bob, for Phil, and for Phil's friend, Stephen. After the usual complications brought on by Robert Brown he attempted to explain why he came down to Miss Rebecca's house, affairs became adjusted with Philip and Marion, Katherine and Robert and Jenkins and Patty pairing off.

Miss Edith Loversud and Miss Theresa, the teachers who conducted the play, are to be congratulated for such a meritorious performance.

PLAN TO ENLARGE PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

To accommodate the increasing enrollment St. Mary's school will furnish the hall as a school room for next fall, and another room is to be secured, too, according to a decision reached at a recent meeting of the school society. Father Charles Olson said today that after an enrollment of 210 children at the beginning of the year the largest increase has been noted since the school was opened.

Father Olson was elected president of the school society at the meeting, other officers are James Tracy, vice-president; Harold Downes, secretary; E. B. Buss, treasurer.

FINED FOR USING 1919 AUTO PLATES FOR 1920 LICENSE

Pleading guilty to painting over his 1919 auto license to make them look like 1920 plates, Faf Latta, Clinton youth, was fined $15 and costs by Judge Maxfield in municipal court today. He stated he had made application sometime ago for his 1920 license. He was taken into custody by Sheriff Beiley yesterday.

PLANNING FLOWER BORDERS.

Flowers should be chosen with regard to height of plants, color of blooms and season of blooming—Well planned borders provide blooms throughout the growing season.

(Written for the United States School Garden Army.)

The flower borders should be located against the fence and close up against the sunny sides of the house. The center of the lawn should be free of any rough weeds.

Preparation of soil.—To grow well, flowers need a deep, mellow, rich soil. In order to secure these conditions a trench should be made the length and width of the border, and at least 15 inches deep. In spreading the soil the bottom fine litter should be thrown on one side to be carried away, and the remaining soil mixed with one-foot layer of well rotted manure or compost.

Planning the border.—The attractiveness as well as the usefulness of the flower border depends upon the choice and arrangement of flowers.

The flowers should be chosen as to height of plants, color of blooms, and seasons of blooming. The tallest flowers should be placed at the back of the border, and so arranged that wide none of the plants need be shaded. Cut-and-come-again sunflower, zinnia, calendula, calliopsis, marigold, and nasturtium.

There should be a riot of colors as the flowers are arranged in clumps of two or three throughout the entire length of the border, and if white flowers are used, placed between shades of other colors. In well planned flower borders some flowers should be in bloom every month during the growing season. A surprisingly large number of individual plants of each variety will be needed during the first year. Flower borders are the most attractive with this in view. After the first year, if perennials might predominate enough annual flowers will fill up

TWO ARE BURNED IN SAMSON EXPLOSION

Explosion in the assembling room of the Samson Tractor Co. plant on Industrial avenue this morning caused injuries to two men working on the conveyor belt. The men, George Elins, with a dislocated shoulder, and Burns on his face and hands; and Oscar Anderson, burns on hands and face, were taken to Mercy hospital in the city ambulance. Both are Janesville men.

Miss Alma Haavisto, as Patty, and Fred Hill, as Jenkins, servants in Miss Rebecca's household were easily the stars, entering into their parts with more than ordinary exuberance of spirit, which entirely relieved the presentation of their characters from anything amateurish or stilted.

Miss Genevieve Cook, as Katherine Rogers' place to Miss Rebecca also exhibited possession of character and exhibited much commendation for natural and yet expressive portraiture.

F. M. Barnett played the part of Philip Royston, nephew to Miss Rebecca and Kitteh, as T. A. Beadnell, Robert's town clerk, Benoist, Marion; Miss Hazel Rogers, Rebecca Luke, a maiden lady; and Mrs. McCallum, Marion Bryan, another's friend.

All of the cast displayed careful training and made an entertainment which merited more of the people attending.

"Mr. Bob" is a well chosen vehicle both for its attractive plot and sparkling wit. It deals with the ever popular situation created by mistaken identities. Robert Brown the clerk, who was secretly summoned to the house by Miss Rebecca, to settle a legal matter, being taken for Mr. Bob, for Phil, and for Phil's friend, Stephen. After the usual complications brought on by Robert Brown he attempted to explain why he came down to Miss Rebecca's house, affairs became adjusted with Philip and Marion, Katherine and Robert and Jenkins and Patty pairing off.

Miss Edith Loversud and Miss Theresa, the teachers who conducted the play, are to be congratulated for such a meritorious performance.

PLAN TO ENLARGE PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

To accommodate the increasing enrollment St. Mary's school will furnish the hall as a school room for next fall, and another room is to be secured, too, according to a decision reached at a recent meeting of the school society. A building committee to make necessary changes in the hall was appointed, consisting of James R. Tracy, chairman; John Boos, A. P. Fox, W. B. Sullivan and E. B. Buss. Rev. Father Charles Olson said today that after an enrollment of 210 children at the beginning of the year the largest increase has been noted since the school was opened.

Father Olson was elected president of the school society at the meeting, other officers are James Tracy, vice-president; Harold Downes, secretary; E. B. Buss, treasurer.

ROCK COUNTY WAR VETS INTERESTED IN U. S. LAND OFFER

Interesting facts have been learned from replies to 2,000 questionnaires sent out by the local Red Cross office to all ex-service men in Rock county, except the unincorporated townships of Newark, Beloit, and Clinton. These townships are in the district of the Beloit chapter. Of the number sent 800 have been filled out and returned.

From these, it is learned that 582 carburetors in use, a dripping carburetor is believed to have become ignited from the side-firing of a motor. The men were at work assembling tractors when the explosion occurred. One injured his shoulder when he jumped away.

No damage to the machinery resulted. There was any shutdown in the conveyor line necessary. The explosion rocked the whole building.

The fire department responded to an alarm from the plant but the trucks arrived.

PRESIDENTIAL ROW PREPARING FOR BIG DRIVE ON JUNE 8

Chicago—"Presidential Row," an institution unique in American politics, is preparing for the final drive of the campaign, which will culminate in the nomination of a republican candidate for president of the United States.

The "Row," which each four years is the center of national pre-convention politics, is going through the biggest season in its history.

"Presidential Row" includes parts of two Michigan Boulevard hotels, which are connected by a sun-parade passage, making the convention a pretty little thing who called him brother, he felt within him the impact of conflicting emotions, of contradictory impulses.

He loved her instantly; he wanted to tell her the truth, yet he knew that if he did so, he, a fugitive from justice, would be hanged.

This is only part of the extraordinary tale, "The River's End," by James Oliver Curwood and Marshall's first photoplay from his own studios.

LOCAL COMMITTEE TO ADJUST CLAIMS

Janesville One of Five Centers in State with Welfare Committee Organized.

To adjust matter connected with claims of service men in the Service Welfare Committee met at the office of Roger Cunningham, commander of the local camp of the American Legion Friday afternoon. C. G. Mathys, field representative of the Adjutant Secretary of war with headquarters in Madison was present. Others and the organizations represented were Red Cross, Miss Manitowoc, Y. M. C. A., John Kohler, K. of C., George Sennett; American Legion, Robert Cunningham, Legion and File, P. H. S. Dr. Wayne A. Munn, Salvation Army, Joseph Connor, Citizens, A. E. Matheson, Mr. Cunningham president. The Janeville committee is one of five established in the state, others being in Green Bay, Madison, Racine, and Oshkosh.

Through the Service and Information Branch of the General Staff, the War Department announces the formation of 176 service men's welfare committees throughout the United States. The work of these committees is rapidly increasing, and it is now stated that there will be such an organization in all cities of sufficient size to warrant it. Twenty officers are covering the country from this ideal view, traveling from town to town.

Committee Membership

Membership in these committees as a rule includes representatives from the American Legion, Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, Camp Community Service, Salvation Army, and the Jewish Welfare Board, as well as such civic organizations as chambers of commerce, Kiwanis and Rotary clubs, also officers from the various government bureaus, including the War Training Board, the National Training Board, and the United States public health service; army, navy and marine recruiting officers, and an officer representing the Service and Information branch of the War Department.

In his official announcement, Lieutenant Colonel Mathew C. Smith, General Staff, head of the Service and Information branch, says:

"The bringing together of the representatives of the American Legion and all their welfare, civic and government agencies, in addition to accomplishing the primary object for which the committees are formed, to help the ex-service men solve individual problems, helps further other important work in avoiding duplication of effort and clearing up the atmosphere generally, so that we are now sure of a much increased efficiency in handling of matters pertaining to ex-soldiers and sailors. Our reports show that these committees are serving a most useful purpose."

In fact, several other organizations interested in the re-employment and the welfare of ex-service men have already started to form similar committees, modeled on this plan of the Service and Information branch.

Work With Other Agencies

It is not intended that these committees should supersede any existing agency. A committee is to act as a governing and administrative body keeping each organization informed through its representative what the others are doing—a clearing house for information. In this way each member not only learns what all other members are doing, but he can obtain the latest information from the various government agencies on the laws and such regulations and instructions as may be promulgated from time to time. Thus they can pass on to the men the very latest news and advice.

It is indispensable that the Red Cross, the Legion and various welfare organizations continue their activities. The war department's connection with these agencies is that of active co-operation, and the development of working with the splendid work of any welfare organization; what the war department desires is to help them and increase their importance.

County Organizations

Eventually the committees may become county organizations. The membership is not at all limited, and should be extended as far as possible.

Being a community organization, each committee will be in a position to assist in the Public Health, Vocational Training board,

the War Risk Insurance men, and what they are actually doing, and what problems confront them.

Primarily the idea is to reach ex-soldiers personally through their associations, also through posters, newspaper publicity and circulars, as well as by their connection with the American Legion posts.

In its work of assisting the ex-service man to obtain the relief provided for him by the government, the experience of the Service and Information branch shows clearly that practically all of those who are yet to secure this relief must be reached by direct contact. Hence the idea of bringing together representatives of the various welfare, civic and government agencies into a central committee. The members of the committee will receive first-hand information as to government relief and how to secure it by association with representatives of the government bureaus charged with administering the relief.

Society of Disabled Soldier Wishes

The work has gone far enough to show that the committee idea offers a complete solution for the clearing up of all matters concerning disabled soldiers and those having any claim against the government.

The Service and Information branch has compiled six bulletins of information, and has given them nation-wide distribution. These are: No. 1, "Relief to Disabled Soldiers"; No. 2, "Vocational Education for Service Men"; No. 3, "Benefits Brought Service Men by Sweet Bill"; No. 4, "Statement of Claims"; No. 5, "The Work of the Service and Information Branch"; No. 6, "Compensation, Hospitalization, and Retirement Benefits".

Copies of these bulletins may be had upon request by addressing Lieutenant Colonel M. C. Smith, Council of National Defense Building, Washington, D. C. The address of the chair of various local committees may be ascertained from the local representatives of the Red Cross or the American Legion.

CARRANZA KILLED BY OWN SOLDIERS

(Continued from page 1) a rancher. His experiences as a rancher first, then as judge, senator and finally governor of Coahuila, made Carranza familiar with the affairs of Mexico. The root of political unrest in Mexico.

Small Band

Having defied Huerta, Carranza rallied a small band of 600 followers which grew into a sizable army when he won the support of Francisco Villa. Carranza's influence spread rapidly as the military activities of his chief aide were multiplying the various factions in Northern Mexico around Torreón. For a time, real progress was slow. Huerta's machinations had embroiled Mexico with the United States and intervention seemed imminent.

Then came Villa's victory at Torreón, the first real success of the winter. Carranza was pressing Huerta hard when the A. C. conference to discuss the differences between the United States and Huerta was held in Buffalo. General Carranza refused to suspend hostilities and declined to abide by the result of those diplomatic negotiations. The fighting went on with the result that General Huerta resigned the provisional presidency July 15, 1914, and a month later General Carranza made his triumphal entry into Mexico City. Huerta in the meantime having fled to Spain.

War Is Declared.

Shortly afterward independent revolutionists led by Zapata General Pascual Orozco and others commenced. Dissension between Villa and Carranza which began at the Torreón conference reacted a citizen September 23, 1914, when Villa declared war on Carranza. Gen. Alvarado, general.

The Villa general met at Aguilera in November 1914 with the forces of the Zapatistas.

London, May 22.—The bolshevik offensive against the Poles along the more northerly part of the front in the region of the Berezina is continuing to make progress, according to Front's official statement from Moscow received by wireless today.

The soviet communists reads:

"In the direction of Molotovka, after fierce fighting, our troops forced the river. The front is again

"On the right bank of the Berezina, we secured a number of villages eight miles west and southwest of Berezina village.

"In the region of Borisov (about 50 miles northeast of Minsk) our troops occupied several villages 12 miles east and southeast of Bobruisk (about 10 miles southeast of Minsk on the Berezina)."

U. S. Recognizes Carranza.

In the diplomatic exchanges that ensued between President Wilson and Carranza, who had been officially recognized as the head of the de facto government by the United States of Mexico's sovereignty and the concession to his government of reciprocal rights of invasion. He maintained his position despite the crisis caused by the clashes between Mexican and American soldiers at Puebla and Carranza, but when war seemed unavoidable Carranza succeeded in stemming the tide by his proposal for the appointment of a joint commission to settle the difficulties amicably. The proposal was accepted by President Wilson and the commissioners of the commission resulted in the withdrawal of the American army and the restoration of friendly relations between the two countries.

This day in 1819 the steamship, Savannah, a large wooden vessel equipped with small engines, side wheels and sails, started on her voyage to Liverpool and St. Petersburg, the first steamship in the world to cross the Atlantic. It took 26 days to make the passage to Liverpool and most of the voyage was with the aid of sails. It was 20 years later before marine engines were made of sufficient power to drive a ship across the Atlantic and the Sirius and Great Western made the voyage to England in 17 and 16 days.

THE HOUSING REPORT.

That Janesville is going straight ahead with the housing program and that the biggest problem confronting the city is to be solved, is pretty clearly in evidence by the action taken on the report of the committee which investigated the question in several Michigan cities. Manager Harmon was very clear and explicit in that report. The one big central idea is that Janesville needs houses within the means of the man who labors in the shops and factories and who makes up the greater part of the new population. We have a duty beyond mere selfishness to him and must meet the responsibility thrust upon us.

Many houses of a low-cost, so constructed as to be added to in time when the purchaser is able or is obliged to meet the needs of a growing family, is the need of Janesville.

Committees of the chamber having the matter in hand are giving attention to the most important detail and that is the financing. The present condition of the money market and the curtailment of loans for non-essentials and speculation have no bearing on the financing of the housing plan. That is neither speculative nor non-essential.

Janesville must have houses. It is a situation so acute also that there is no time to lose. Other things can well be dropped if they get in the way of this homes for the people problem.

JUSTICE TO POSTAL EMPLOYEES.

Postal employees are the poorest paid of any of the government servants. Carriers and clerks have long been neglected in the matter of wages. One postmaster general after another in his ambition to make a showing has failed to appreciate the necessity for giving an adequate wage. Postal employees are required to have a training to constantly be passing examinations, to know the business of handling the mails and are subjected to rules which in a private business would not be tolerated.

New York city has a postoffice that banks and handles nearly a billion dollars a year. The superintendents of the big divisions handling mail and money have a salary of $3,360 a year. Did they work in a bank and hold equally responsible positions they would be getting from $10,000 to $26,000 annually. Writing of this condition the Literary Digest says:

"Consider the kind of a man our postoffice demands as clerk. His work is highly specialized and complex; he must be skilled by long and intensive training and study, memorizing thousands of facts, intricate systems of classifications, and many methods used in banking, insurance, and commercial business. He must be familiar with the postal laws and regulations filling a volume of 1,700 sections. All this study and preparation must be in his own time and at his own expense. And when he stands in his hard-earned place, a full-equipped postal expert in the employ of the American people, he is paid less than the common unskilled day-laborer on the streets. One of these experts, who after twenty-four years of postal service had acquired special knowledge and experience invaluable to the government, testified, 'I could go out as a rick-wagon driver and get $50 a week, yet the government pays me an average of about $4 a day.'

Here is a chance for doing something worth while and every citizen can help. There is a measure before congress to give postal employees justice. It should receive the general support. You can tell the congressman from your district and Senators Lenroot and La Follette how you feel about it. Mr. Burleson will do nothing. He is only interested in making a showing for his department. Congress must act. And there is where you as a sovereign American citizen, have a word to say. Say it.

CARRANZA.

The telegraph brings the news this morning that Carranza is dead. The item has been delayed. It was foregone that the late president and dictator should die violent death so long as he remained within the borders of his own country. He had a great opportunity in Mexico and failed. He preferred self interest to that of the people. He dealt with political opponents as a tyrant. A dead enemy was to him the only safe enemy. There are several million ignorant peons in Mexico who have never been anything more than slaves. The nation is steeped in illiteracy. Carranza made no effort to change these conditions. He has paid the tragic penalty for greed and selfishness.

A LEGISLATIVE GOOD SAMARITAN.

The more one reads the call for the special session of the Wisconsin legislature, the more one is impressed with the fact that it was a useless expense to the people. "He shall deliver the people from their sins." That is the meaning of the name Emanuel. We are going to pay about $60,000 for a special session of the legislature that Milwaukee should be delivered from her sins as a rent profeeter. That is the ostensible excuse for the call. Incidentally we are to act on 26 or more other pieces of legislation. The bills are all prepared and printed and when the members come from the corn and go to the patches next week they will be handed the legislation they are expected to pass, by the governor. There is no need for any one of these members to think. That is a good idea for it saves time, makes things easy for the governor, and avoids brain fog by the members.

Rent profeetering is hereafter to be a crime in Milwaukee, and in Oshkosh, Green Bay, Janesville, Superior and other large cities of the state, it will be one of the virtues, established by inference.

What was the legislature called into session for anyway? There is no great emergency, no crisis threatens, no enemy is pawning at the door, no great calamity needs our attention, no great principles of our government are endangered. There is but one feature that redeems the call from being wholly bad and entirely unjustifiable: the icing on an otherwise soggy cake, and that is the legislation proposed for increasing teachers' pay.

But the whole call is made up for special legislation.

Our statutes are overburdened with that sort of thing. There is not a thing for the special session to care for that could not have been done at the regular session as provided in the constitution.

Had the call been for the purpose of eliminating some of the expensive frills of state government there would have been some palliation, but the reasons as expressed in the proclamation, are puerile, vicious in precedent, and have no place in the list of genuine emergencies. The whole state is to be upset with a session whose chief business is to add to the taxes of the people. Instead of delivering the people from their sins, it savors more of delivering them into added bondage of expense.

In the Literary Digest of the current week the vote for president reported, again places Herbert Hoover third in the list of republican candidates. Gen. Wobbd leads with 246,301, Johnson 230,363, and Hoover 209,488. Lowden is 100,000 behind Hoover. The voting is much lighter in the democratic selection, McAdoo leading, Wilson next, and Gov. Edwards third. Apparently the hope of the wet advocates is only in Edwards.

Peace is up to the president. But that he will veto the resolution providing for an end of the war is as sure as that he is the president. The president may want the war to end, but he wants it ended his way and by his own act. Just as he was a long time getting in, he is going to be a long time getting out.

With the death of Colosimo and the prison for Vinc Chicago seems to be sweeping out the trash preparatory to the hold-up at the national convention.

Two things have failed us in the hour of greatest need—Col. House and the ouija board.

It would seem about time for Mary Pickford to have another family squabble to get into the lime-light. These movie queens are so retiring.

In Texas they are eating corn on the cob. Here we still eat the cob in breakfast food.

At the Nation's Capital

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright 1920 by Janesville Gazette)

Washington, D. C., May 27.—If the American people want to bring down the price of sugar, they have a very simple remedy available. David Franklin Houston, secretary of the treasury, who used to be secretary of agriculture, and who is just now trying to exert the influence of the treasury department in the movement to cut down the cost of living, is the author of the suggestion that the best way to handle the sugar question is to point out some salient facts about sugar consumption which probably will amaze to the average household.

"Did you ever look over the data as to the amount of sugar folks used to eat ten and fifteen years ago?" remarked Secretary Houston to the writer. He took from the shelf in his office a thick volume called "The Statistical Abstract of the United States" and opened it to page 561.

Down the page of figures is the average amount that was consumed by every individual in the United States since 1865. In that year, dividing the total amount consumed by the population of the country, approximately 18 pounds was eaten. At the end of 1875, this had gone up to 43 pounds. Ten years more, and the per capita consumption was 54 pounds. In 1895 it was 62 pounds, and in 1905 it was 71 pounds. From that year on, the amounts vary between 70 and 80 pounds, and in the year 1918 when the food administration was urging conservation, the per capita consumption was 77 pounds.

"Now, what do you think was the average consumed last year?" continued Secretary Houston. "It was 93 pounds; surely there is no necessity for such a large consumption. We used to get along on less, and if we could only conserve a third of 93 pounds per individual, the price of sugar would come down immediately."

"It isn't at the breakfast table where the over-consumption of sugar occurs. It isn't the sweet we take with our coffee, or with cereals that counts up. But we eat so much more cake, and pies and ice cream and candy. Time was when children were cautioned against too much sweets. Their elders aren't observing the rule themselves. We could get along and be just as healthy as people have been for the last forty years if we consumed less sugar. If each individual ate one third less there wouldn't be any trouble about the price."

Indeed, Secretary Houston emphasized that it was to a large extent outside the home in the restaurants, cafes, soda fountains and pastry shop where the consumption of sugar had risen although the extravagant use of pies and other sweets in the home was by no means a small factor in the 93 pounds per capita consumption last year.

No body on the other hand excuses the profiteer who has taken advantage of the demand for sugar to raise prices, but the demand hadn't existed. The profiteer would never have had their opportunity. Some people here are inclined to think the coming of national prohibition has had a good deal to do with the ever consumption of sugar but it will be observed that the figure 93 was the average for the year 1919 before prohibition applied to the more populous sections of the United States. Of course, in many cities like New York, the candy shop and soda fountain has taken the same quarters previously occupied by the saloon and decorated them so handsomely as to attract a constant flow of people who are tempted to eat candy with their luncheons. The government used to be able to control the amount of sugar that could be used in candy, but government control of food consumption is a thing of the past. Very few efforts are made toward conservation. It is true that the food administration didn't apply its power of law but depended upon publicity and the power of appeal to get the co-operation of the American people, but the licensing system was as effective as any statute could be. The government therefore can only point out the facts from time to time to the American people. And Secretary Houston believes that if the fathers and mothers will search their recollections just a trifle they will recall that the world and the United States were in the thirty years before the European war by eating less sugar than folks do nowadays. And everybody conserves just a third, there will be more available for the whole country and the government will be better able to check up on the profiteer whose argument today is that the great demand is what fixes his price.

May 22, 1880.—Four men were brought up in court and fined this morning for attempting to burn the circus down yesterday. The circus was put up by a number of children and boys, who got up early to see it come in.

COUP'S BIG CIRCUS, here yesterday, was attended by large crowds at both performances. The show went to Madison from here.

JUST FOLKS

UNLUCKY BILLY GREEN

I used to think that Billy Green was luckier than me. He hasn't any mother watchin' over him to see if his neck an' ears are dirty, an' there's no one seems to care if his shoes are nice an' shiny or he ever combs his hair. I used to think so they tell me, an' with all I have to do.

I used to think that maybe I should like to be one, too.

He wears the same old shirtwaist an' his stockin' and holes.

An' they're bigger than they should be, an' they haven't any soles.

An' his underwear's not fuzzy, like the kind I have to wear.

He gets safety pins for buttons, an' when he goes anywhere

No one ever comes in to wash him. Oh, I've

An' he's wished to be an orphan just like Billy with no one to pester me.

But I'm glad I'm not an orphan, an' I found out today.

When Billy's leg got twisted in a game we followed play.

An' it hurt him something awful, an' nobody came to see.

An' he didn't have a mother who would take him on her knee.

An' I took him in to get him a kiss. So I took him in to get him a kiss.

An' he said: "Oh, Bud, you're lucky! An' your mother just divine!"

Now I'm never goin' to whimper when my mother scrubs my neck.

An' I scrub me just a little coz my clothing is

Once I drink a beerish highball,

And then, they say, died game.

Of course, this lad was bratty.

But his style was rather crude:

For now they drink wool alcohol.

And kick off while they're dressed!

—Lou Akerstrom.

We are glad to see that the government is going to begin coining two-cent pieces. We used to use the nickel for certain purposes, but it seems that the nickel has grown so weak lately that it can't be used to get anywhere. The two-cent piece will be a sort of crutch or traveling companion, as it were.

Added to a nickel, one of the new two-cent pieces ought to buy at least three cents worth of almost anything.

The two-cent piece will be of great value to regular weekly allowance. It too will be excellent to drop in the collection plate and to shove through the apertures of these little change boxes that the ladies hold as they stand on the corner collecting funds. When dropped, the two-cent piece makes a noise almost exactly like a quarter.

The two-cent piece can also be used to buy certain politicians at their actual value.

A good many troubles are homebrew, too.

—John L. Hooker.

Another business man in politics is Elton H. Hooker of New York City, who has announced his candidacy for the republican nomination for GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK.

The citizens of this state are entitled to a business-like conduct of their affairs and should demand nothing less," said Mr. Hooker in announcing his candidacy.

It is my belief that the people of this state are of the opinion that their affairs are properly managed, these far-reaching and beneficial results may be secured:

"1. Increased production, both in amount and quality, of the farm and in the city.

"2. Elimination of dangerous radicalism by handling overt acts relentlessly under criminal law and meeting agitation with education.

"3. Reduction in the cost of government by cutting out waste without loss of efficiency.

"4. Development of the state's resources to increase additional wealth over which to spread the tax burden."

Mr. Hooker, who is 50 years old, is president of the Hooker Electro-chemical Company, which he started in a small way and developed into a large concern, employing 1,000 persons and turning out more than $7,000,000. He was born in Rochester and worked his way through the University of Rochester and Cornell University.

Appointed deputy state superintendent of public works when Theodore Roosevelt was formed, he was a member of the staff of the prosecution at the time that Abe Rueff was tried. After Francis J. Heney was shot down in court at this trial, Johnson took his place and secured the conviction of Rueff. Senator Johnson has been governor of the state of California, and founder of the Progressive party and ran for Vice President on their ticket in 1912. He was elected United States senator in 1917.

The Diary of an Engaged Girl by PHYLIS PHILLIPS

JACK PLEASES LINDSEY WITH A GIFT.

Jack had been simply adorable for the last few days. Poor fellow, he feels our nearing separation pretty much, I know. I can tell that he hates to tear himself away in the evenings and always gets me on the phone as early as possible in the morning. The phone is by my bed, and it seems to please him to death to wake me up in the morning, or to surprise me, when I am lying there, to wake and have a smile at me, too. "You are such a sweet little thing," is what he invariably purrs over at me. We've gotten awfully well acquainted in a sort of more intimate distant way over the old phone. Would you ever believe the possible?

I decided to telephone can be the most ridiculous thing imaginable. Silence on the phone just quivers with intensity, whether of love or hate. Dear me, I only discovered the telephone a few weeks ago, right after becoming engaged. Then I had to learn to speak up the loveliest language today, just the sort I have been longing for. Slander hoofs, that are most becoming to my sort of beauty. Now I really feel like a woman of the world. It's so much easier to make one's eyes roll along with earrings, especially jade ones. Green has always stood for mystery and jealousy and everything weird through all ages. Emeralds are equally fascinating and snakes eyes, cat's eyes, and emeralds eyes, all green and mysterious, but most de-shameful somehow.

When I get all fussed up, and my earrings on, I feel wonderful, like a Harry Collins model, don't you know? And when I can't find my coat—it's too amusing. I feel as if my name ought to be Lo-Lo or Flaine or But invariably mother and the same sound of "Lindsey" bring me to my senses—my hard, matter-of-fact N.-England feelings. I wonder if I'll ever be able to lose 'em? Jack assures me with a smile at times that he feels sure I will, some day, when dreams come true, so that's comforting.

We went to The Nine O'clock Review this evening and had the best time ever. Jack told me there wasn't a girl in the bunch could come up to him! Such honeyed words. I love them.

I have taken a new lease on life, engaged life that is, is seen and I have won for the moments when Jack appears like a perfect kid. I refuse to be ashamed of this, however, and as for him, well his chest has expanded several inches.

He told me with a laugh that his mother had told him about Cecilia's secret, and how he had explained all about my views to her, and finally forced her to accept them, in toto!

HEALTH PLUS

If we could construct a man with brass lungs, copper skin, stomach mercerized, cotton whiskers, plenty of iron in his blood and other in his bones, if we could then administer to our human flivver an infusion of red blood (I say red blood to distinguish it from the yellow, pink and blue bloods of common folks who are not heroes in novels), and if the fusion of all these elements would go so smoothly, and his heart started beating at 70 or so a minute, and his digestion proceeded smoothly without any attention from us, and all his vital organs began to function without anybody's direction, guidance or concern, we'd not only perfect men, we'd have a symphony in the makings of a symphony about him enjoy good health?

He certainly would not. In order to enjoy good health it is necessary to have not health merely, but health plus.

Grant you our man has perfect health, not the faintest trace of a symptom, not the slightest trace of the patient medicine testimonials, save as any man likes good humor. Yet he doesn't enjoy good health. I am quite sure of that. He helped construct the man, and I know just what was put into his make-up. We didn't use any plus in building him. Tin men never have any in them.

The plus stands for something best described with one of those wonderful words which make up American language. It is the plus.

For the record nowadays. Health is fine; nearly half the people have more or less health. But pep is something to boot. If you have health plus, you have pep, and that enables you to EXIST.

For the record nowadays. Health is fine; nearly half the people have more or less health. But pep is something to boot. If you have health plus, you have pep, and that enables you to EXIST.

Your letter with plus you can stand a lot of hard knocks, if necessary, and come up smiling every time. Things don't get your caps. You just don't take life seriously—unless perchance you are a doctor—and then you take it only, under great strain.

I know the secret of pep. It is merely a matter of oxygen. The only trouble with our man was that we gave him no oxygen. There are various ways of absorbing more oxygen. Tell me about the best. Now let me list some of the things which prevent absorption of oxygen and therefore keep you from ENJOYING health, or having pep:

1. Coddling—Overdressing, overheating, avoiding fresh air, that moves windowboards, and all that dear old grandma business.

Heart and Home Problems

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of twenty. We moved here from New York about a year ago. I was very popular there but society, belonging to many clubs, went to receptions, etc.

When I moved here I went to clubs and the people snubbed me just because I came from out of town. I guess the people in this town want to know where you were born and everything. I never was treated so terribly in all my life. I have gone to other cities and have been treated respectfully.

It is in business here and is well known all over. I am not stuck up or think myself beautiful or the best dresser as some do, although I have everything I want. I have all the gentlemen friends I want, but don't expect me to invite them to dinner. I am going to ones I know quite well. I don't believe in going with any one that asks me—it never pays.

I treat every one the same, always have a smile on my face, and am cheerful. I can hold my head up, and conversation is and be interesting, they say. I have a car of my own, also can have my father's any time I want it.

(1) Could you tell me what is the matter with me? I would like to improve if I can.

(2) I suppose I ought to lay my whole history out to the people? Well, I am not ashamed of it.

(3) Why are people in such small towns so important to new people who come?

It is that money buys those people? I could buy myself in and be considered the whole thing, but that isn't honest, is it?

MAYFLOWER.

(1) Your attitude antagonizes. Even your letter has made me feel resentful and unimportant with my own people. You must love and admire the people about you in order to receive admiration from them. In your last question you ask, "Why?" If that money buys those people?

That is why it means so much to me.

(2) The people are far less interested in your history than you realize. When they see your eyes and your mouth and your manner they know you are nice, but they don't realize that they feel your unfriendliness toward them. Probably from the first you felt you would be very popular because you came from a large city.

(3) I do not understand what you mean in the third question. It is a failing of human nature to feel of

GOOD LUNCHEON DISHES

Spaghetti with Mushrooms. One cup spaghetti, one-half cup mushrooms, one cup cream cheese, two tablespoons fat. Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water 12 minutes. Drain, rinse with cold water, and add to tomato soup. Brown mushrooms in fat and add with cheese to spaghetti. Heat through and serve.

Cheese Omelet. Six eggs, two tablespoons of grated cheese, six tablespoons of milk, salt, pepper, paprika. Separate the whites of the eggs from the yolks. Add to the yolks the milk, seasonings and paprika.

Make white sauce and add mashed pimento. Heat asparagus, arrange six or eight stalks on each piece of toast. Pour sauce over toast and asparagus. Serve at once.

SIMPLE LUNCHEONS

The Strange Case of Cavendish

By

RANDALL PARRISH
Author of "The Devil's Own,"
"My Lady of the North," Etc.

(Copyright by Randall Parrish.)

New York—the one that was buried for Cavendish? Oh, I read about that. Benton show it to me in the paper."

"That's the whole trouble," Enright answered. "I do not know who he was, or how he was not there." repeated the dazed lawyer, his lips trembling. "And—has got away? Good heavens! man, where has he gone?" After the shattering.

Lacy stared at him through the darkness, and burst into a roar of derisive, coarse, curiously carved intentiveness.

"That's Jim Westcott's jackknife. He's been listening to all we said. Now we are up against it."

"What's that?" The question came from Enright, still at the corner of the house, unable to tell what had happened.

"Westcott has been here listening to our talk. He pried open the window with his knife, so he could hear. Moore caught him, and got knocked out."

"He—he heard our talk—in there," repeated the dazed lawyer, his lips trembling. "And—has got away? Good heavens! man, where has he gone?" After the shattering.

Lacy stared at him through the darkness, and burst into a roar of derisive, coarse, curiously carved intentiveness.

"Who? Jim Westcott? The sheriff? Well, hardly at this stage of the game. That's your way down East, no doubt, but out in this country style is different, sir. Westcott is after any sheriff. In the first place, he hasn't any evidence. He knows a thing or two, but he can't prove it; and if we move faster than he does, we'll blow his brains—see?"

"What do you mean?" Lacy stepped forward, and hissed.

"Put Cavendish where he can't get at him. There's no other chance. If Jim Westcott ever finds that fellow alive our goose is cooked. And we've got the advantage—we know where the man is."

"And Westcott doesn't?"

"Exactly, but he will know. He'll comb these hills until he finds the trail—that's Jim Westcott. Come on back inside, both of you, and I'll tell you my plan."

The door closed behind them, shutting out the yellow glow, and leaving the hillside black and lonely.

Miss Donovan did not go down to supper. But she waited some time in her office, her eyes on the stairs, but she failed to appear, and he lacked the necessary courage to seek her in her own room. Then Enright called him, and, compelled by his attachment, the absence of any lack of appetite, as she subsidized her a supply of food by way of the back stairs, which she ate with decided relish, but she had no desire to show any anxiety regarding a meeting with her companion.

"But you saw a difference?"

"Because I looked for it; never would have otherwise. But anyway, I was already convinced that he was not the man. I am not sure what I should have thought if I had met him again upon the street."

Lacy appeared amused, crossing the room, and expectorating into the open stove.

"You fellows make me laugh," he said grimly. "I am hardly idiot enough to be taken in by that sort of old wives' tale. However, if that is your story, stick to it—but if you were to ever tell it in court, it would take a jury about five minutes to bring in their verdict. Let's get the business over with. You can't get out in a sort of cleft, or the premature discharge of blasting powder; these things are quite common out here. And to prevent any silly at this end, before you fellows get hold of the stink, you want to call off my working gang and let Westcott alone. Come, now, speak up!"

"Yes," acknowledged Enright. "I don't care so much for Westcott, but I want things kept quiet."

Lacy whistled a few bars, his hands thrust deep into his trouser pockets, then, after a few minutes' cogitation, he resumed:

"All right then; we'll take it as it lies. The only question unsettled, Enright, is—what is all this worth to me?"

CHAPTER VII.

Miss Rue Pays a Call.

Some slight noise caused Westcott to straighten up, and then partially round. He had barely time to fling up one arm in the direction of the sound. The next instant was one of mad, desperate struggle, in which he realized only that he dare not relax his grip on the wrist of his unknown antagonist. It was a fierce, intense grapple, every muscle strained to the utmost, except for the stamping of feet, which was its purpose.

When Westcott drove his clenched right into the shadowed face, smashing it the last time so hard the man's grip broke, and he went staggering back. With a leap forward, Westcott closed behind the other, could regain position. Again the clenched fist struck and the fellow went down in the darkness, whirling backward to the earth, and lay there, motionless.

An instant, panting, Westcott scarcely recovered, the visitor stared at the huddled figure, his arm drawn back. Then he became aware of excitement within, the sound of voices, the tramp of feet on the floor, the sudden opening of a door. A gleam of light shot out, the young husband, "this morning" the missus' chased me out of the house, "with a trying pan, and when I went home tonight she was crying her eyes out because I hadn't kissed her when we went out!"

"What's worrying you, Jim?" asked a collier, as he met a mate at the club.

"These women!" replied the other, a newly married man. "They are queer cattle!"

"How do you know?" asked the young husband.

"I know," said the young husband,

"With one spring he was across the shapesless form on the ground, and had vanished into the darkness beyond."

Lacy was first to reach the unconscious body, stumbling over it in the dark, and then rushed forward, revolver in hand. He cursed, rising to his knees, and staring about in the silent darkness.

"There's a man lying here—dead. Likely. Bring a light. No, the fellow is alive." Danieline Moore. Here you are, I suppose."

The fellow groaned, opened his eyes, and looked about dazedly.

"There was a fellow at that window there. I saw him from below, and crept along, and he turned around just as I struck."

"He was at that window, you say?"

"Yes, kneelin' down like he was looking into the room. Oh, Lord!"

Lacy crunched over to the side of the shack, and bent down to get a better view. His fingers came in contact with the knife which upheld the sash, and he plucked it out, holding it up in the beam of light, passing through the rents in the torn curtain. Hand held intentivly.

"That's Jim Westcott's jackknife. He's been listening to all we said. Now we are up against it."

"What's that?" The question came from Enright, still at the corner of the house, unable to tell what had happened.

"Westcott has been here listening to our talk. He pried open the window with his knife, so he could hear. Moore caught him, and got knocked out."

"He—he heard our talk—in there," repeated the dazed lawyer, his lips trembling. "And—has got away? Good heavens! man, where has he gone?" After the shattering.

Lacy stared at him through the darkness, and burst into a roar of derisive, coarse, curiously carved intentiveness.

"Who? Jim Westcott? The sheriff? Well, hardly at this stage of the game. That's your way down East, no doubt, but out in this country style is different, sir. Westcott is after any sheriff. In the first place, he hasn't any evidence. He knows a thing or two, but he can't prove it; and if we move faster than he does, we'll blow his brains—see?"

"What do you mean?" Lacy stepped forward, and hissed.

"Put Cavendish where he can't get at him. There's no other chance. If Jim Westcott ever finds that fellow alive our goose is cooked. And we've got the advantage—we know where the man is."

The door closed behind them, shutting out the yellow glow, and leaving the hillside black and lonely.

Autobiography of Black Hawk

Our women had planted a few patches of corn, which was growing nicely, and promised a subsistence for our children—but the white people again came—“We crossed the Mississippi during the night, and encamped some distance below Rock Island. The great war chief convened another council, for the purpose of making a treaty with us. In this treaty he agreed to give us corn in place of that we had left growing in our fields. I touched the gourdshell to this treaty, and was determined to live in peace.”

The corn that had been given us, was soon found to be inadequate for our wants; when loud lamentations were heard in the camp by our women and children, for their roast-corns, beans and squashes. To satisfy them, a small party of braves went over, in the night, to steal corn from their own fields. They were discovered by the whites, and fired upon. Complaints were again made of the deprivations committed by some of my people, on their own cornfields!

I understood from our agent, that there had been a provision made in one of our treaties for assistance in agriculture, and that we could have our fields ploughed if we required it. I therefore called upon him, and requested him to have me a small log house built, and a field ploughed that fall, as I wished to live retired. He promised to have it done, I then went to the trader, and asked for permission to be buried in the grave yard at our village, among my old friends and warriors; which he gave cheerfully. I then returned to my people satisfied.

A short time after this, a party of Foxes went up to Prairie du Chien to avenge the murder of their chiefs and relations, which had been committed the summer previous, by the Menomonees and Sioux. When they arrived in the vicinity of the encampment of the Menomonees, they met with a Winnebago, and inquired for the Menomonee camp; and requested him to go on before them and see if there were any Winnebagos in it—and if so, to tell them that they had better return to their own camp. He went, and gave the information, not only to the Winnebagos, but to the Menomonees, that they might be prepared. The party soon followed, killed twenty-eight Menomonees, and made their escape.

This retaliation, (which with us is considered lawful and right,) created considerable excitement among the whites! A demand was made for the Foxes to be surrendered, and tried by the white people! The principal men came to me during the fall, and asked my advice. I conceived that they had done right, and that our Great Father acted very unjustly, in demanding them, when he had suffered all their chiefs to be decoyed away, and murdered by the Menomonees, without having ever made a similar demand of them. If he had no right in the first instance, he had none now; and for my part, I conceive the right very questionable; if not altogether usurpation, in any case, where a difference exists between two nations, for him to interfere!

The Foxes joined my band, with an intention to go out with them to hunt. He said:

“The president is very sorry to be put to the trouble and expense of sending a large body of soldiers here, to remove you from the lands you have long since ceded to the United States. Your Great Father has already warned you repeatedly, through your agent, to leave the country; and he is very sorry to find that you have disobeyed his orders. Your Great Father wishes you well; and asks nothing from you but what is reasonable and right. I hope you will consult your own interest, and leave the country you are occupying, and go to the other side of the Mississippi.”

I replied: “That we had never sold our country. We never received any annuities from our American father! And we are determined to hold on to our village!”

The war chief, apparently angry, rose and said: “Who is Black Hawk? Who is Black Hawk?”

I responded: “I am a Sac! my forefather was a Sac! and all the nations call me a SAC!”

The war chief said: “I came here, neither to beat nor hire you to leave your village. My business is to remove you, peacefully if I can, but forcibly if I must! I will now give you two days to remove—and if you do not cross the Mississippi within that time, I will adopt measures to force you away!”

I told him that I never could consent to leave my village, and was determined not to leave it!

The council broke up, and the war chief retired to the fort. I consulted the prophet again. He said he had been dreaming, and that the Great Spirit had directed that a woman, the daughter of Mat-ta-tas, the old chief of the village, should take a stick in her hand and go before the war-chief, and tell him that she is the daughter of Mat-ta-tas, and that he had always been the white man's friend! That he had fought their battles—been wounded in their service—and had always spoken well of them—and she had never heard him say that he had sold their village! The whites are numerous, and can take it from us if they choose; but we hoped they would not be so unfeeling! If they were still in our favor to ask: she wished her people to be allowed to remain long enough to gather the provisions now growing in their fields; that she was a woman, and had worked hard to raise something to support her children! And we are driven from our village without being allowed to save our corn, many of our little children must perish with hunger!”

Accordingly, Mat-ta-tas' daughter was sent to the fort, accompanied by several of our young men. They were admitted. She went before the war chief, and told the story of the prophet! The war chief said that the president did not send him here to make treaties with the women, but to hold council with them! That our young men must leave the fort, but she might remain if she wished!

All our plans were now defeated. We must cross the river, or return to our village and await the coming of the war chief with his soldiers. We determined on the latter, finding that our agent, interpreter, trader, and Ke-o-kuck, (who were determined on breaking my resistance,) had seduced several of my warriors to cross the Mississippi. I sent a deputation to the agent, at the request of my band, pledging myself to leave the country in the fall, provided permission was given us to remain, and secure our crop of corn, then growing—as we would be in a starving situation if we were driven off without the means of subsistence.

The deputation returned with an answer from the war chief, “that no further time would be given us than that specified, and if we were not then gone, he would remove us!”

I directed my village to proclaim, that my orders were. In the event of the war chief coming to our village to remove us, that not a gun should be fired, nor any resistance offered. That if he determined to fight, for them to remain quietly in their lodges, and let him kill them if he chose!

I felt conscious that this great war chief would not hurt our people—and my object was not war! Had it been, we would have attacked, and killed the war chief and his braves, when in council with us—as they were then completely in our power. But his mainly conduct and soldierly deportment, his mild, yet energetic manner, which proved his bravery, forbade it.

Some of our young men who had been out as spies, came in and reported, that they had discovered a large body of mounted men coming towards our village, who looked like a war party. They arrived and took position below Rock river, for their place of encampment.

The great war chief, (Gen. Gaines) entered Rock river in a steamboat, with his soldiers and one big gun. They passed, and returned close by our village; but excited no alarm among my braves. No attention was paid to the boat by any of our people—even our little children, who were playing on the bank of the river, as usual, continued their amusement. The water being shallow, the boat got around, which gave the whites some trouble. If they had asked for assistance, there was not a brave in my band, who would not willingly have aided them. Their people were permitted to pass and repass through our village, and were treated with friendship by our people.

The war chief appointed the next day to remove us! I would have remained and been taken prisoner by the

Tent Villages Spring Up on River Banks

St. Louis—High rents and scarcity of houses have caused “tent villages” to spring up in the vicinity of St. Louis. Several have appeared along the Mississippi river and in various sections of St. Louis. The operators generally report they have stated their purpose, and intend to camp out until cold weather sets in. Several industrial concerns that are enlarging their plants, it is said, will set up tent colonies for employees they bring in from the country, until homes are erected for them.

Explorer Tells of Attack by Cannibals in South America

Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice and Mrs. Rice.

New York—Details of an attack upon him and his party by a tribe of mountain savages in the wilds of South America were told by Alexander Hamilton Rice, an explorer, on his return to New York recently. Dr. Rice, who was accompanied by his wife, formerly Mrs. George D. Widener of Philadelphia, said he believed the cannibal savages who charged upon him and his little party of wives and Dr. Rice, were Guaribos.

He said this tribe is feared by all other tribes of the poisonous wilderness, and they were last reported by a band of Spaniards in 1763. Then they attacked the adventurous Spaniards in about the same spot that they charged upon Dr. Rice and his companion.

The only weapons in the party were a rifle, a shotgun and revolver, with a limited amount of ammunition. Dr. Rice fired a rifle but lot over the head of the savage. Immediately about 200 savages sprang into view.

They were unusually tall and strongly built, ranged in complexion from dark brown to fair. They were armed with bows six and one-half feet long and with bows and arrows. Brandishing these weapons they raised a great howling, jumping and dancing about, and coming continually closer to the little band of explorers. The latter could hardly see they were tiger claws in their lower lips.

Dr. Rice and others of his party tried to talk to them in four different dialects of the country, the Baras, the Maqui-Ritare, the Tapo, and the Guanare—in vain. The savages made no noise. The wild men kept advancing toward the encamped group, still howling and rolling their eyes.

Shots Repulse Them Thrice

When he felt there was nothing else to do Dr. Rice gave the signal to fire. Several volleys were fired at the first volley. The others disappeared. But within a short time they appeared again, charging toward the explorers. Another volley was fired. More savages dropped. Again the attackers fell back. They made one more advance. More shots were fired and then they massed formation. And then they disappeared.

The exploring party hastily broke camp, got into canoes and started toward their base. But for four days and nights as they paddled down stream arrows fell about them from concealed enemies and threatening shots reached their ears.

BARBER TO SHOOT FALLS IN BARREL

Bristol, Eng.—Charles George Stephens, a barber of this town, has announced that he is going to try to shoot Niagara Falls in a barrel. He intends to make the attempt at the end of June or early in July.

Inside the barrel Stephens plans to be secured by straps and the barrel is to be weighted at the bottom with a hundredweight and weighed to keep it upright in the water. Special shooting apparatus is also being fitted.

Among the many other feats which Stephens claims to have performed are the following:

Kissing a lion in its den, shaving a camel in its den, and parachute descents from balloons; for which feats he boasts three ribbons, five gold medals and six silver medals.

To shoot Niagara Falls in a barrel has been the ambition of numerous persons seeking notoriety but few have accomplished it. Mrs. Anna Edson Taylor who went over the falls in a wooden barrel about 1904 was severely injured but recovered. “Bob” Lester made the drop successfully and without injury in a steel barrel in 1911.

Big Crowd Expected at Sunday's Game With Soldiers

FT. SHERIDAN TEAM IS DRAWING CARD

Downpour Adds Another Bad-Week End to Samson Home Season—Teams Ready for Battle.

BULLETIN:
Fair Grounds, 2 P. M.—Today's game between the Samson Tractors and Fort Sheridan is called off because of wet grounds.
A force of men will be put on the diamond the first thing in the morning to get the field in shape. Regardless of the weather, Sunday's game will be played. A big crowd of fans is looked for to make up for the loss of today's pastime.

A hoodoo, or something seems to be following the Samson Tractors on their home games. Another week-end has rolled round and instead of cold and raw weather, a hot electrical storm has threatened to cancel the battle for this afternoon.

Up until noon, however, the management of the club were hopeful that the showers would let up sufficiently to let the sun come out for the balance of the day and dry the diamond. This appeared doubtful with the prediction "continued rain followed by cooler weather."

Army Men Entertained
The soldiers of Fort Sheridan, scheduled to appear here this p.m. and tomorrow, arrived and arrived last night. They were royally entertained at dinner last night and later attended the final Samson dance of the season. This morning they spent under cover inspecting the huge tractor plant.

With no record for today, it is expected that the record crowd of the season will fall out tomorrow if the day is fair.

SIMS GIVES PRAISE TO NAVY PERSONNEL

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Newport, R. I., May 22.—Rear Admiral William S. Sims, president of the naval college, addressing the graduating class today, said that barring a few cases you may personnel not only improved to all requirements but exceeded our most sanguine expectations in the endurance, zeal, and loyal initiative they displayed in the world war.

"This applies," he added, "particularly to the intelligent and skillful handling of the transport services in effective cooperation with the forces abroad."

He said it was natural that some officers expressed opinions on the conduct of the war when questioned and that these opinions later appeared "in many grotesquely mistaken editorials criticising the strategy and conduct" of the army and navy.

Admiral Sims said that during the war he received many letters of criticism from "leading members of the government" naval officers and civilians.

"Without exception," he said, "they showed ignorance of the conditions governing the naval campaign."

13 HORSES ENTER KENTUCKY HANDICAP

Louisville, Ky., May 22.—Thirteen 3-year-old and up distance horses will attempt to negotiate the distance of a mile and a quarter in the $10,000 added money Kentucky handicap at Churchill Downs this afternoon. Indications this morning were for clear weather and a fast track.

Boiface, which won the 1000 yards in a record time, including the Clark handicap, was reported as the probable public favorite. King Gordon, winner of the handicap in 1917, however had many supporters as did Midway and The Porter. Barber, timekeeper, Richter, scorekeeper.

Joe Oeschger.

Joe Oeschger must smile every time he thinks about that record-breaking 26 inning pitching duel he staged with Leon Cadore of the Dodgers the other day, and then thinks about some other event in his baseball career—the willingness of Bill Miller and the Giants to let him go at the slightest pretext.

Art and Economy in Home Building

No. 54—Design Submitted by the National Builders' Bureau, Spokane, Wash.

A Real Architectural Achievement

You've seen rows and rows of square houses of the old box type and may have wondered why people did not follow more attractive designs in building. The square house has, however, some very practical advantages.

In the house-plan shown here the architect has preserved all of the advantages of the square type of dwelling, but he has produced a design which has an original and distinguished appearance. This house is one which will attract favorable attention anywhere.

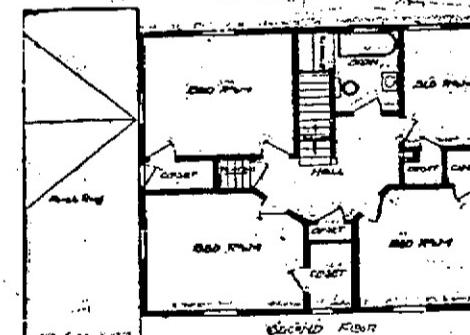

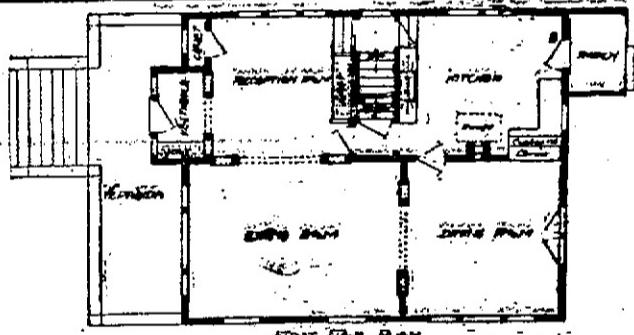

There is a full-length veranda, from which entrance is made to a large reception room.

The second floor has three large bedrooms and one small one which measures 9 by 12 feet. The smaller bedroom is just the thing for the little boy or girl who wants a separate bedroom, "just like grown folks."

The size of this dwelling is 29 feet by 33 feet. It is a real architectural achievement.

The merchants on this page will cooperate with you in every way possible. They will take care of your home problems—and are ready to serve you at all times.

DORT
Quality Goes Clear Through

COMPARE THE PRICE

We ask you to compare the Dort price with cars in the Dort class—yes, with cars priced considerably higher. This is a fair method of determining value—a comparison that shows definitely what you are buying at the Dort price and what you might buy at some other price.

What You Will Find

You will find that Dort uses better grade material than other cars in its price class. That Dort gasoline, tires and oil will average uncommonly high mileage. That the Dort is simple in construction and that it is accessible. And that many Dort owners mechanically inclined, do their own repair work because of this. Above all, you will find that the approval of the vast Dort following—60,000 owners—expresses itself in praise of such essential merits as strength, economy, comfort, good looks and long life.

Where's Better Value?
Where there is there better value. Where is there another car—at $125 or anywhere near it—that offers such full measure of return for every dollar invested?

And the comparative value of Dort does not only exceed in first cost. It goes still further.

In slow depreciation, its thrifty economy—both in running expense and repair upkeep—will show real dollar saving in day-in and day-out use.

ZENITH CARBURETOR

It is easy for the user of a passenger car or motor truck to understand the function of the carburetor—that all important little instrument which is the very heart of the engine. It is easy to understand the necessity of having a proper mixture of air and gasoline, which by its explosion in the engine cylinders, constitutes the source of power.

But it is difficult for the average man or woman without technical education to understand the "hows and whys" of the average carburetor.

ZENITH SIMPLICITY

The extreme simplicity of the ZENITH Carburetor, its freedom from the necessity of adjustments, and its principle of operation based upon certain well known laws of nature, make it easily understood by anyone.
